9312 Rhode Island Avenue

Daniels Park

Built in 1909, the Bowers-Sargent House is a one-and-one-half-story, hip-roof dwelling of the bungalow type with four large engaged gabled dormers, one in each plane of the roof. The bottom half of the house is sheathed in German siding; the top half is covered in diamond-shaped wood shingles. It is one of the early dwellings built in the 1906 subdivision of Daniels Park. With its modified bungalow form and Queen Anne style decorative detail, it combines features of the popular residential styles of the period.
