University of Maryland,
College Park
(State of Maryland)

Built in 1913, Calvert Hall is an excellent example of early-20th-century eclectic architecture that was designed by the Washington, D.C., architecture firm of Flurnoy and Flurnoy. The residence hall was named after Charles B. Calvert, who helped establish the Maryland Agricultural Act and was a prime mover in the founding of the Maryland Agricultural College (now the University of Maryland).
