Built c. 1891 by the Charlton Heights Improvement Company, the Wetherald House is a two-and-one-half-story, cross-gabled frame dwelling with a three-part window and balcony in the principal gable front. A one-story wraparound porch shelters the long north side. When sold in 1899 it was described as a "substantial and comfortable Cottage Residence." In 1940 it was sold to Joseph and Sallie Wetherald and remained in the Wetherald family until 1987. It is a good example of a late Victorian suburban dwelling, one of the early houses built in the suburb of Charlton Heights (now Berwyn Heights).
