8100 Croom Road

Croom

Built in the early nineteenth century and in the 1870s, the William W. Duley House is a two-part frame structure, consisting of a small one-and-one-half-story dwelling with a larger two-story, side-gabled Victorian addition. The original dwelling was built for Judson Scott; the dominant Victorian section was added by William Duley after 1873. The house is associated with early grist mill and sawmill operations in this area.
