

87B-036-35 Keech House

22700 Aquasco Road

Aquasco

Built circa 1900, the Keech House is a vernacular building with a bungalow form that is unusual in an area where most dwellings from the first quarter of the 20th-century feature Victorian architectural details. Many of the early features of this property are preserved, including three barns built circa 1930. Thomas M. and Eva M. Keech purchased the three-acre parcel of farmland from George W. Morton and replaced an earlier, two-story dwelling that stood on the site with this house. Thomas M. Keech died in 1905, and with Eva's death in 1910, five heirs took possession of the property. It remained in the Keech family until 1985.
